About Griffith University A global career choice

Griffith University is one of Australia's most progressive, innovative and dynamic universities.

Strategically located in Australia's fastest-growing region - the flourishing Brisbane - Gold Coast corridor, Griffith is a five-campus university with more than 3,200 staff and 37,800 students, including 8,800 international students.

Griffith is now Australia's ninth largest higher education institution in terms of student load.

Ranked in the top 4% of universities worldwide (Times HES-QS World Ranking) Griffith University's global perspective is preparing graduates for workplaces of the future. As a Griffith graduate you will have the versatility to be mobile across careers and countries.

In 2008, Griffith University was the number one Australian university destination for students from 28 countries, including Canada, Japan, Norway, Sweden, Portugal, United Arab Emirates and Brazil.

Since opening its doors in 1971, Griffith has pioneered many innovations - offering Australia's first environmental science and Asian studies degrees, and being the first Australian business school to sign the United Nations principles of responsible management education to name a few.

Griffith's Research and Teaching strengths cover many hot button issues - health, water and the environment alongside Asian politics and trade, sustainable tourism, criminology, and music and the arts.

The University's strong international standing is built on highly-regarded research and teaching staff, international partnerships and the calibre of its programs and graduates.

Griffith's long-standing national and international reputation in research in the environmental sciences affords it the largest group of environmental professionals of any university in Australia, and it will soon host the National Climate Change Adaptation Research Facility.
